ABOVE are the titles for the research papers that I completed for my Master's degree in Leadership/Terrorism. I compiled them under "No Jurisdictional Boundaries: The Terrorism Papers," to provide resources, information and my perspectives on Leadership, Terrorism, Faith and preparing families, communities and our nation for future terrorist attacks.

BELOW are the titles for the courses in my Master's and Bachelor's degrees that comprise the foundation of my research. Both degrees are Interdisciplinary. Prior to attending college, I served in the military police followed by civilian law enforcement, non-profit, school security, gang and violence prevention and the film industry. I was blessed to receive the guidance of Regent University and American University to create specialized degrees based on my experience and pursuits.

The Master's degree from Regent University, combines the Schools of Divinity, Government and Leadership. It includes a oneyear certification course in Leadership Coaching. The Bachelor's degree from American University, combines the Schools of Justice, Law & Society, International Service and Communication. The degree was issued through the School of Communication www.soc.american.edu since I designed the degree to address violence prevention and have an output and application through media. The degree title is: "Multimedia Approaches to Violence Prevention."
